FDP THEME

Management per se is dynamic in nature and various domains are so interrelated that one area can not be explored without referring to other spheres. It is widely believed that good subject knowledge will offer successful classroom teaching but in management education, the challenge to a management educator is to not only teach a subject separately in class but also to know & highlight the relationship with various other specializations and subjects. The FDP on Teaching Management Subjects: Applied Practices and Pedagogy aims to enlighten the management educators about the interrelationship of various management domains and train them to become an all round management faculty. Apart from this, the pedagogy to teach management subjects is a challenge, the challenge is to involve students in the applied aspects of the subjects and using the pedagogy which are very dynamic and directly related to the present business working environment.
